DR. G. VIJAYA MOHAN REDDY: Madam, a situation which could have shaken the world has somehow been averted. Indian freedom movement had learnt greately from the Soviet Revolution and the Soviet Union's steadfast policy of supporting anti-colonial movement all over the world has helped the progress of the world. Their great victory in the Second World War also has resulted in the independence of almost all the colonial countries. That is why the incidents in the Soviet Union have a great impact on the world. But I am not a pessimist. I think today the Soviet people themselves are in command of the situation in the Soviet Union because these things which have been there were being talked about for the past ten years. The great Sakharov was saying consistently that when there was no possibility of a nuclear war things would have to change. The same thing was said by Mahatma Gandhi, that when nuclear weapons emerged, the world should see to it that a nuclear war did not take place. The same thing was said by Jawaharlal Nehru. Today there is no possibility of a nuclear war. That would mean a new world emerging. The Soviet people have asserted themselves and Gorbachev is back and is fully in control of the reins of power and there is a strong Government in the Soviet Union. The only thing is how to get all these nationalities to work together. That is being sorted out in the Soviet Union and they will succeed because the Soviet people themselves are there to defend the values for whichthe Sovietpeople had struggled and had been able to achieve. That was also of great help to the world people's movement. That is why things are changing and in the changing world India should analyse these events.
